WHAT TO DO WITH OUR HILI

holding to what great extent it is covered by mountains and hills, often wonder how apart from mining and lumbering, with a little agriculture, the surface of the country is to be made available for the occupation and support of man. The hill and mountainous intry is looked upon as entirely useless for any purpose but the extraction of minerals,

COUNTRY. People coming to this Island and be-Any thought of its being made available for supplying animal or vegetable life, would generally be scouted as next to impossible. But we may ask to what extent are such opinions true? Can it be possible that the greater portion of the Island will afford living to neither man nor beast? Or is this only a conclusion derived from an exceedingly superficial view. We are inclined to think the latter the true state of the case. We can easily conceive one coming from a country covered in every direction with a fertile soil, to one where rocks show upon every side, being apt to institute comparisons any thing but favorable to the latter. We must, however, take things as we find them, and will soon discover that there are few things so bad but at least they can be turned to some account. So of our mountain and hill country. Although we need not hope to shine in agriculture, we need not despair of turning that to a profitable account, for sheep walks. Some may think that even for that purpose it is worthless, but there is not a shadow of a reason for such a view. Sheep flourish in other countries wherever they can pick but a very scanty herbage, and we see no reason why they may not here, where for a portion of the year at least the pasturage on the hill-sides is of the richest description, even with our present limited variety of introduced grasses. Even upon our very highest mountains sufficient grass is found to keep in flourishing condition the wild mountain sheep whose fleece yields a kind of wool of the finest texture. If these animals can find such subsistence amid the snow-peaked Cascades, a hardy breed of domestic sheep might be maintained on the mountains having less altitude. The climate of this country is such that feed might be had all the year round, which would be a great saving to the farmer, and place him in better position than the sheep-raisers in Canada or the Northern States, who have nearly every season to provide a supply of winter fodder. It is true that in summer our hills are generally pretty well parched, but this, however, we imagine might be remedied if needful, by the introduction of new grasses suitable to that kind of soil, such for instance as the alfalfa. As long as a sufficient supply of food is maintained, the drought of summer would not be a serious objection; in fact it would be more an advantage than otherwise. There may be some difference of opinion as to what particular kind or kinds of sheep would be best adapted for all purposes in a country like this, having so moist a spring and fall. The Southdown is, we believe, the breed principally kept as yet, and appears to do very well-the increase, we understand, coming as high as 90 per cent. One would think however, the Cheviot or Cotswold, or crossings from them would perhaps do better in our more exposed situations on the mountains. This however, must of sible shape the result of their researches, for the information of intending settlers. There are perhaps few more profitable sources of employment and income in any country than sheep farming; and since the American war it is more than ever likely to be a good field for investment. The stoppage of cotton has caused manufacturers to turn more seriously to the working of woolen fabrics, and people have come to make a more general use of them. This use too is likely to continue according as greater success is attained in variety and superior quality of the articles produced. By entering extensively into the growth of wool, we will ultimately be in a position to commence manufacturing both for our own use and for export. Nature has evidently fitted us for a commercial and manufacturing nation. Our coal and our metals, our insular situation, our facilities for ship-building, and our evident unsuitableness for very extensive agricul tural operations, clearly point out this as our destiny. We ought therefore to take such steps as would enable us to lay an early foundation for that career. Were all our hill country turned into sheep runs we would have a superabundant supply of mutton for our mining, manufacturing and trading population, and wool either for export or conversion into clothes. To give some idea of the evident profit and of experiments; and it would be well if our Agricultural Society would devote some attention to this subject, and put in an accespermanence of wool growing, we insert the following extract from the U.S. Economist, which is well worth the consideration of those who are desirous of investing their capital in promising undertakings in these colonies in promising undertakings in these colonies: "The lowest price that wool has reached in the Eastern markets for the last thirty-six years was in 1849, when fine wool was sold at 33 cents, and coarse at 23 cents. At that time sheep were sold in Ohio at one dollar and a half a head. The growers that year received in Ohio to medium wool 25 cents a pound. Now supposing the theory to be correct that the increase of the flock will pay the keeping, it will be observed that the profit at this lowest price in 36 years was 50 per cent. on the value of the sheep. We learn that shorn sheep can be bought at ou per cent. on the value of the sheep. We learn that shorn sheep can be bought at present in Ohio at $2 50 per head. It will therefore be seen that the clip next year at 40 cents per pound would still pay 50 per cent on the investment, at present prices of sheep. sheep.

Into what channel can capitalists put their money that will be more likely to pay a large profit than in sheep husbandry"?

with all due deference to honorable members he thought that such a course was a mere waste of time.

Mr. De Cosmos looked upon the matter principally as a question of order; he was of the opinion that there was no authority against going into Committe of the Whole, although even should any course be customary in England, it need not necessarily be so here, where the circumstances might be totally different. It was also customary in replying to an address to discuss it paragraph by para-

Mr. Pidwell adduced the practice in other avor of the course ; he said that the speeches ravor of the course; he said that the speeches from the Throne purposely contained a variety of topics which invited the discussion of the House in Committee of the whole.

The Speaker asked whether Mr. Pidwell wished to discuss the address or the reply.

done by hand. The tower timbers are each 20 inches square. Supporting the cables are 16 of these sticks, each 26 feet 6 inches long, 4 sticks being framed together by means of 14 girth timbers and 17 1½ inch wrought-iron bolts, spread at bottom, resting on heavy sills, and coming together at the top, forming a pyramid, of massive timber. These cables are secured on the west side by means of massive bolts, 3½ inches in diameter, each set four feet into the hard bed rock; and on the east side by means of granite masonry, built underground sixty feet in the hill from the roadway. The cables hang with a deflection of 20 feet. Attached to each cable, equi-distant and five feet apart are 52 suspension rods, 13½ inches in diameter, of various leugths, shortening towards the centre, in such a manner as to give the roadway below a curve of two feet raise in the span. came to town, when the prisoner came suddenly out of another house in his shirt and struck him with some weapon over his left pearance, forming an effective truss, and rendering the bridge perfectly rigid. From the platform four wire guys are fastened to the rock in each bank; thus by means of the truss and guys, all undulation or oscillation is entirely provented.

The distance between the cables is 14 feet, thus giving attiple room for all the traffic likely to pass over it.

The approaches to the bridge are excellent, and the heaviest teams have sufficient room to drive on to the bridge with ease.

The cables and ironwork are painted black, the timber and woodwork white.

The difficulty of creeting such a structure can well be imagined by a visit to the locality. The material for its construction was not landed on the ground till the 15th June; by the 1st of September the enlire work was completed.

The Big Canon of Fraser River, that fearful spot as much dreaded by all going up the river, and where so many lives have been lost, is now spanned by this substantial bridge; and while it is a source of amazement of the fidiculties it has overcome.

It is worthy of temark, that although the men employed were constantly exposed to dangers of falling and drowning, there has been no accident from the commencement of the undertaking.

Search was made and the weapon (produced) was found lying on the ground. Prisoner was thereupon arrested and brought to jail. Sergt. Hill was also examined. In answer to an enquiry from the bench, Supt. Smith stated that the prisoner was a well-known keeper of Indian brothels. The prisoner in defence endeavoured to persuade the Court that the seamen were making a great disturbance, chascoloules ought to receive our serious attention.

There is little doubt that by such an union "economy and efficiency would be promoted," but it is a great question whether "political capacity would be developed" or the "strength of the colonies consolidated." This step may be an impolitic measure, from two causes, arising either from the external position of the colonies or from their internal character or from both. In tais letter I will confine myself more particularly to the objections which take their rise out of the internal condition and political character of the people, and first as to reasons against the union which might be urged by the inhabitants of British Columbia. If an union were to take place and the seat of Government continued in Victoria it might be objected.

That all the evils and inconveniences them folly strength and inconveniences than folly an absorbing to a stabilish another system of property in man? We are to be the greatest customers of the South in the days of her independence, and as such customers upon our heads will be all the guilt of slavery. Mr. Pomberton evi-denced the value he placed upon the defence set up by imposing a fine of £5, or in de-fault we worth imprisonment.

Do not speak of some virtue in another man's wife to remind your own of a fault. Do not reproach your wife with personal defects, for if she has sensibility you inflict a wound difficult to heal. 3. At present the revenue of British Columbia is probably 4 times as great as that of Yancouver Island: but this disproportion may not always exist, and would not long continue if the people of this Island would shake off their constitutional apathy and bring themselves to believe that the day will come when an independent source of wealth must be found, and some other support than the gold of British Columbia must be relied upon. At any rate the representatives of British Columbia would have such a voice in the distribution of the doubte revenue as her importance demands—and if her population be greater than that of Vancouver Island, so will her induce be in the general parliament.

In a recent debate in the House of Lords Lord Lyttelton presented a petition from Taranaki, New Zealand, relative to the distress which had been brought upon the inhabitants of that province in consequence of hostilities with the natives. He admitted that it was desirable that the colonies should be responsible for their internal detence, but this principle had not been adopted by the Colonial Office with respect to New Zealand, where the control of native affairs had been vested in the hands of the Governor and not of the colonists. It was, therefore, only just that this country, before giving up the management of native affairs to the colonists, should see them out of the difficulties in which they had been involved through no fault of their own. As soon as this was done the relations of the colony with the mother country ought to be altered without delay, but not until then. In Taranaki the farms of the settlers had been destroyed, the people were cooped up in the town and forbidden to go to their homesteads, the Maori King exercised sovereign rights, stopped the reads and prevented the passage of the mails. In a recent debate in the House of Lords King exercised sovereign rights, stopped the roads, and prevented the passage of the mails, and armed natives held lands which the settlers had bought from the Crown and culti-
